Ms. Billman, I see from your letter this morning that you are still having considerable difficulty understanding plain English, so I'll try again.

As I wrote to you on Monday, we will be officially advising you and the public of our decision related to Mr. Oscarson's "fake" debate request this Friday, March 30, 2018.

For some strange reason, you seem to be under mistaken the impression that we are bound by your artificial, self-imposed "directions" and "deadlines."

We are not.

We'll give you our answer when we're ready, not before.

As to your pabulum about "negotiations," we requested a number of reasonable changes and/or additions in our counter-proposal, all of which you rejected.

Your position, clearly articulated, is "take it or leave it."

In you spare time, you might want to look up the word "negotiate." Try Google.

As previously stated, you'll get our answer this Friday.

What you subsequently do with that answer is up to you.

Sincerely yours,

Chuck Muth
